W. P. FULLER'S ANNUAL PICNIC A GREAT SUCCESS

The fifth annual picnic given by the employees of W. P. Fuller & Co. last Sunday was enjoyed by all the 645 employees and guests.

The Sunol left Fuller's wharf promptly at 8 a. m., carrying 115 South San Francisco passengers, and arrived on schedule time at the Oakland pier. The special train stopped at Third and Broadway to gather up the employees of the Oakland branch and arrived at Idylwood Park (Niles canyon) at 11 o'clock.

Dancing was begun in the large pavilion while the lunch committee prepared the feast, which was a rare treat to all, under the grove of manzanitas.

The races lasted for an hour and a half, the main interest centering on the relay race between the factory and store employees. The factory boys lost on a foul, one of the runners breaking the tape before his teammate had crossed the line by a few feet.

The South San Franciscans got their share of prizes. Idylwood Park is an ideal pleasure ground as can be found within the state. The scenery is very picturesque—rolling ground, plenty of shade, with the Alameda rolling at the foot of the park grounds. Several nice trout were caught by those who were fishermen.

The weather was grand. This day was enjoyed by old and young. The program was good, so an enjoyable day was spent away from city and factory life.

At the semi-annual fire races, held at the factory Monday, the rubber paint department captured first money, their time from the start of the run, unwinding of hose, coupling and having water out of the nozzle, was 34 1/4 seconds.

THE DEATH OF MRS. J. P. LODGE

Lodge—In South San Francisco, May 31, 1916, Josephine P., beloved wife of Jack P. Lodge, sister of Mrs. J. C. Morton of Moss Beach, Cal., and Charles E. and John H. Perry of Brooklyn, N. Y., a native of New York, aged 41 years.

The funeral services took place Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the chapel of Halsted & Co., 1122 Sutter street. The Rev. Leslie C. Kelley of this city officiated, and the remains were taken to Brooklyn, N. Y., on Friday for interment by Mr. Lodge and Mrs. J. C. Morton.

Mrs. Lodge was loved by every one who knew her during her residence here of fourteen months. She was a loving wife and her effort was to make every one happy. The Enterprise extends to Mr. Lodge and relatives its heartfelt sympathy in their hour of bereavement.

THE WOMAN'S CLUB

The Woman's Club of South San Francisco is a small part of the federation of women's clubs that has just finished its biennial congress in New York, and a California woman was elected by a very large majority as president for the next two years.

This club is in the San Francisco district. Mrs. F. Fredericks has been elected district president at the convention held in April in San Jose. This district is the coast counties from Humboldt to Monterey—fourteen counties—with seventy-eight clubs and 5815 members. The state convention was held in May at Del Monte.

As this is Shakespeare's three hundredth anniversary, all the clubs have been giving Shakespearean programs. At Del Monte over 200 women held a pageant in costume on the lawn of the hotel, which made a beautiful setting. In the evening a dance in costume, interspersed with music of that time and recitations from his works was given. Four hundred members of the federation were present and many notable speakers from all over the state.

A CLUB MEMBER.

In the dining room of the Metropolitan Hotel at 8 p. m. Thursday, June 8th, the Woman's Club will give a "Pound Party" for the Florence Crittenton Home. Every one is asked to bring a pound of something, from soap to soda, to be sent to the home to help the little girls gathered there, who are helpless and homeless, where they are trained for self-support and helped to positions, at 370 Twentieth avenue, San Francisco, a branch of a notable memorial, as there are "homes" in many larger cities. Which—with score cards at 25 cents, prizes and refreshments—you may be sure of a pleasant evening.

Be sure you come to the "Pound Party" for the Florence Crittenton Home at the Metropolitan Hotel dining room on the evening of June 8th at 8 o'clock, have a game of whist and get not only the prize, but enjoy feeling that you are adding your mite—a 25-cent score card and a "pound" of something that can be sent to the home for the helpless little girls. A pound is a little thing, but even a pound goes a good way in adding to the good cheer at the Twentieth avenue home. The Woman's Club invites your presence and your aid for this worthy charity.

For Sale—Mendoc Hotel, restaurant and rooming house of 16 rooms; also kitchen and dining room; doing good business. Address owner, Mrs. M. B. Massey, Colfax, Cal. Advt.

Miss A. Vandenbos, graduate of the Conservatory of Music in Brussels, will give music lessons on the piano and harp at Linden Hotel. Lessons $1. Advt.

REASONS WHY YOU SHOULD VOTE FOR THE HIGH SCHOOL BONDS

Amount of bond issue, $66,000.
Amount of principal to be paid yearly, $2000.

Amount of interest to be paid first year, $3300.

Total amount of money to be raised by school district during the first year, $5300.

Interest decreases yearly, $100.

Assessed valuation of school district, $1,841,725.

Number of cents tax on each $100 necessary to raise first year's payment, $0.29.

Amount of tax which a person whose property is assessed at $700 will have to pay to raise first year's tax, $2.03.

Assessed value of property of South San Francisco Land and Improvement Company, $593,360.

Proportion of the tax which South San Francisco Land and Improvement Company will pay, $1720.74.

Western Meat Company's assessed valuation, $187,550.

Western Meat Company's portion of tax, $543.90.

Pacific Coast Steel Company's assessed valuation, $74,000.

Pacific Coast Steel Company's portion of tax, $214.60.

Assessed valuation of property of principal corporations in South San Francisco, $1,031,285.

Portion of tax to be paid by principal corporations in South San Francisco, $2980.73.

Who will pay the greater part of this tax?

An assessed valuation of $700 is probably a fair average.

Is an annual tax which will not exceed $2.03 burdensome?

This will be $0.0556 per day, or a little more than one-half a cent per day.

There are many voters in this community who do not pay taxes and who have children in the schools. The children of these voters will receive all this advantage for nothing.

The foregoing facts are submitted to the intelligent voters who are interested not only in the welfare of their children, but in the general welfare of the community.

Martin-Budge Engagement.

Cards are out announcing the engagement of Miss Grace Martin of this city to Alexander G. Budge of San Francisco. Miss Martin is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Martin. She has been a resident of our city from childhood and is a favorite with all.

Mr. Budge is a graduate of Stanford University, class of 1912, and is a member of the Sigma Alpha Epsilon Fraternity. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Budge of Medford, Oregon.

The wedding will take place this winter.

Miss Grace Martin left Thursday for a trip to Idaho to visit her brother, Jack Martin. She will be gone for a month or more.

O. T. Johnson of Los Angeles thought so well of the Crittenton memorials that he deeded his beautiful $60,000 home for a "Crittenton Home." Mr. Johnson was for many years a dry goods merchant in Galesburg, Illinois, and well known by some of the residents of this city. He is now a resident of Los Angeles.

COMMUNICATED.

To the Editor of The Enterprise—Sir: The school trustees have called an election for June 6th (next Tuesday), at which the people of this city and school district will vote on the question of issuing $66,000 in bonds to provide money for a high school building and other high school purposes.

The trustees (three very estimable citizens) have decided, without taking counsel of the taxpayers (unless in a private way) just how much of a building there shall be—adopting the plans of one particular architect, without competition on part of or consultation with any other architect, and without any intimation to the taxpayers as to what part or section of the city these three citizens contemplate locating this important proposed public building. If the proposed high school bonds should fail to carry, the blame will rest upon the trustees who failed to take the general public into their confidence and have the entire matter openly considered before calling the election.

MISS LOLITA KELLEY HURT IN AUTO ACCIDENT

At 1:30 o'clock this afternoon an automobile driven by 16-year-old Byrne McSweeney, son of Tax Collector McSweeney, while coasting down Miller avenue at twenty-five miles an hour, ran into an automobile oil truck of the Union Oil Company, driven by John V. Schenone, at the corner of Linden and Miller avenues.

The oil truck was going ten miles an hour and was running along Linden avenue going toward San Francisco when it was run into by the McSweeney machine, which was going so fast it could not be stopped.

Miss Lolita Kelley, daughter of J. H. Kelley, mayor of this city, who was in the back seat, was thrown out of the machine and received a broken nose.

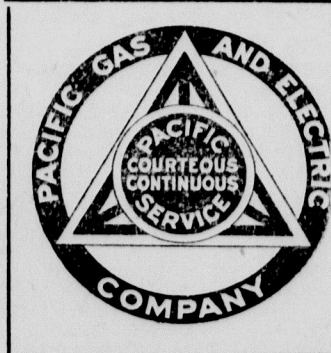

She was taken to the office of Dr. Leo J. Flanagan, who treated her.

Kenneth McIntyre was in the front seat with Byrne McSweeney and neither one was injured.

The front axle of the automobile was bent and the headlight and radiator were broken.

John V. Schenone said: "I was going along Linden avenue at about ten miles an hour, just getting through unloading some oil from my truck, when I got to the corner of Linden and Miller avenues I saw a machine coming down Miller avenue. I tried to get out of the way. I put on all speed, but the other machine hit mine. It could not stop, as it was going so fast."

Byrne McSweeney said: "I was coming down Miller avenue about twenty-five miles an hour. When I got near the corner of Linden and Miller avenues I saw a truck going along Linden avenue. I put on my brakes and skidded, but was unable to stop my machine in time to avoid the accident."

SYNOPSIS.

"Barry" Dale, a Wall street broker, is financially ruined by his perfidious and faithless wife and her companion, Richard Marvin, another broker, who has posed as Dale's best friend. Disheartened and depressed Dale goes to his apartment expecting comfort and solace from his wife. Instead he finds her there in the embraces of Marvin. They laugh at him, and Marvin, the stronger of the two men, literally throws Dale out of his own home. He gives him a pistol and tells him the whole affair can best be settled, to every one's satisfaction, if Dale will kill himself.

Dale wanders through the streets with this end in view. Long after midnight he finds himself on the Brooklyn bridge, where he observes a girl about to leap into the river. A shout from Dale causes her to turn back and flee. They are mere silhouettes in the dim light, and do not see each other's faces. The girl is Mary Austin, a child of the tenements, who has planned suicide to escape marrying "Jack" Rader, a gambler, to satisfy a debt her father owed to Rader. After the incident on the bridge, "Barry" indifferently wanders to a railroad station and buys a ticket for the west.

In the far west "Barry" brings up in a little mining town. There he falls in with an outlaw, who is being sought by a sheriff's posse. A few days later, in a lonely mountain trail, the posse closes in on the outlaw. He directs "Barry" to safety, but is killed by the sheriff. A sky pilot, who had joined them a few hours before, is likewise killed by the posse's bullets. "Barry" buries them both, and decides to impersonate first one and then the other.

Tom Austin, Mary's brother, is addicted to drink, and Mary succeeds in inducing his employers in New York to send him west. Subsequently arrangements are made for Mary and her father to join Tom in the west. Disguised as the outlaw, "Barry" holds up the coach that Mary and her father are riding in. Struck by the girl's beauty and her plea not to rob them, "Barry" lets them pass for a kiss. Afterward, as the sky pilot, "Barry" and Mary become well acquainted in the mining town where she and her father have taken over a small hotel. "Jack" Rader, the gambler, turns up and compromises Tom Austin in a hold-up. He offers to clear him if Mary will consent to marry him. Mary tells the sky pilot of her predicament. "Barry," disguised as the outlaw, saves Tom and shoots the gambler in a pistol battle. When the sheriff's posse arrives he is disguised as the minister.

With renewed strength and ample funds "Barry" returns to New York and seeks out Marvin and his wife.

He throws Marvin into the street and returns the revolver to him, with the same advice he received a year before. Back west Mary waits for the sky pilot's return, standing every night on a little bridge that spans a mountain stream. She is about to despair of his return, when she hears his voice. She turns and sees the same silhouette she saw on the Brooklyn bridge, and for the first time both know they met that night.

The Reason.

"Why don't you brush your hair?" asked a man of the boy with the frowzy hair.

"Ain't got no brush."

"Why don't you use your father's brush?"

"He ain't got no brush."

"No brush? Why hasn't he a brush?"

"Ain't got no hair."

For Rent—For housekeeping, two and three rooms. Inquire P. Palla, Central Hotel, corner of Lux avenue and San Bruno road. Advt.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE CITY BOARD OF TRUSTEES

The city board of trustees met in regular session last Monday evening in the city hall. The following business was disposed of:

Citizen J. Bianchi called the board's attention to the fact that Ratte & Minetti had purchased the saloon that he formerly owned and that he had surrendered the license for same.

A permit was granted the new owners by the following vote: Trustees Holston, Wallace and Kelley, yea; Trustee Healy, no.

A communication was received by the board from Secretary Al C. Sweetser of the Central Labor Council of San Mateo, calling the board's attention to the fact that the cost of living was increasing and that $3 a day was little enough for laboring work.

Moved by Trustee Healy and seconded by Trustee Wallace, the raise was made.

Citizen W. J. Martin asked that a new 16-foot right of way be accepted by the city along Swift avenue, from the Southern Pacific railroad to the water front, for a new street along that avenue.

Notice inviting sealed proposals, No. 25, and ordinance No. 89 were adopted by the board.

In the afternoon the different classes ran races and prizes were awarded. Last but not least was the ladies' egg race, won by Mrs. A. A. Whitten.

A tired but happy company disbanded at the church about 5 p. m.

BUILDING PERMITS

The following building permit was issued by City Clerk Smith on Friday, June 2d:

Rev. Leslie C. Kelley—West half of lot 33, block 99. Construct frame cottage.

HIGH SCHOOL PARTY.

Last Monday at noon a luncheon was given to the baseball team of the South San Francisco high school in honor of their victory over Redwood City a couple of weeks ago. The girls of the school, with the aid of the teachers, laid out a delightful spread before the boys, who showed that they need such things to liven up the team by the way they disposed of what was before them. Miss Rue Clifford acted as toastmaster and speeches were made by the members of the team and some of the girls.

Plans for boosting the new high school at the bond election on Tuesday were then discussed and the party closed with the giving of the school yell.

COMMUNICATED.

I wish to reply to some misleading statements made regarding the actions of the school board with reference to the proposed high school. All our meetings are public. We have at various times given public invitation to the public to attend our meetings. Aside from the teachers, whose presence we required, no one has ever attended these meetings. The public have had every opportunity to learn what we have been doing. All they have to do is to show the same degree of interest in our proceedings as they do with reference to the work of the board of trustees of the city of South San Francisco. So the charge that we have failed to take the public into our confidence is not true. We invite the closest public inspection of all we have done.

With regard to the employment of an architect, I wish to say that we consulted with the following architects: Mr. Norberg, Mr. Edwards, Mr. Batton, Mr. Cole and Mr. Weeks. So it will be readily seen that we did not adopt the plans of one architect without consulting other architects. After going over the whole situation carefully and inspecting a number of buildings now in use for high school purposes, as well as some under construction, we came to the conclusion that Mr. Weeks would best serve the interests of the people of South San Francisco. That is the reason why we employed him. The plans which he has drawn for the proposed high school speak for themselves to any one who will take the trouble to examine them.

The foregoing is submitted in hopes that the people of South San Francisco will vote in favor of bonds for a high school, for it is very much needed by our community.

C. C. CONRAD,

Clerk of the Board of Education.

FRATERNAL ORDERS

Tippecanoe Tribe, No. 111, Improved Order of Red Men, held its election of officers Thursday evening. The following were elected: Sachem, H. G. Hyland; senior sagamore, A. Koffer; junior sagamore, J. Foley; prophet, C. Dovin; keeper of wampum, A. E. Kauffmann; chief of records, D. Hyland; trustees, M. Hyland, F. Robinson, J. A. Riordan; musician, A. C. Johnson.

Past Chief Sachem Harry Edwards bestowed great praise on the officers of the tribe for their faithful observance of their duties in the past and the great good performed by this "Great American order" throughout the land, in true fraternal spirit toward each other, aiding the weak, helping the sick and needy and extending a brotherly hand to those who are afflicted. The spirit of true Americanism, handed down for 400 years, is now in full bloom.

The dispensation granted Tippecanoe Tribe will close June 30th. Applications are coming in and a good class initiation will be held in the near future. As this dispensation is granted for this year, this opportunity should not be lost sight of. Every human soul has the germ of some flower within, and they would open if they could only find sunshine and free air to expand it. Not having enough sunshine is what ails the world. Make people happy and there will not be half the quarreling or a tenth part of the wickedness there is.

So live, so act, that every hour May die as dies the natural flower, A self-reviving thing of power; That every word, and every deed, May bear within itself the seed Of future good in future need.

IN MEMORIAM.

Whereas, It has pleased the Great Spirit, in His infinite wisdom, to call from this vale of tears into the great unknown the spirit of Mrs. Lodge, beloved stepmother of our brother, Cliff Lodge, and

Whereas, We most reverently bow to the decree of the Great Spirit; be it

Mrs. Mason's Scheme

Horace Baxter, twenty-four years old, had been graduated from an Episcopal theological seminary, had packed his trunk preparatory to leaving for home and was looking over a time table to see what train he should take, when a maid brought to his room a postcard from the bishop requesting him to call. Wondering what could be wanted of him, he went immediately to answer the summons.

Baxter had shown unusual proficiency, originality and withal a special ability for speaking without notes. He stood high in his class.

"I received your call, bishop," he said "and have come—"

"Ah, Mr. Baxter. H'm; be seated." Reaching toward a table near by, the bishop fumbled among some papers, selected one, took out of his waistcoat pocket a pair of gold-rimmed glasses, wiped them with a cambric handkerchief, looked over the paper, thought a while, then said:

"I have here a letter from a widow who is apparently wealthy, for she has built a church in memory of her husband. She desires me to recommend some young recent graduate for the position of its rector. The salary is surprisingly large for a beginner—two thousand a year."

Baxter was caught in a whirl of expectation.

"There is a curious condition to the appointment," continued the bishop, "which may or may not be considered an incumbrance. At first I was suspicious that there might be something wrong about it. It doesn't seem to me that any sane woman would suggest such a condition."

"What is the condition?" asked Baxter anxiously.

"That the rector shall marry the owner of the church."

Baxter caught his breath.

"I have made inquiry," the bishop continued, "and have learned that the matter is a bona fide offer."

"How old is the lady?" asked Baxter, unable to control his desire to know the truth.

"She is described as a woman of not much over forty and well preserved. There is nothing very bad, so far as her age and physique are concerned, but—"

"But what?"

"I have been given to understand that she is considered very queer. No one can foretell just what she is going to do."

"Quite likely, considering what she has done in this case," remarked Baxter, looking at a clock on the mantel and thinking of trains.

But the bishop was not thinking of trains. He was thinking how he might put the case in a light that would be of ultimate advantage to a young man whose career promised to be brilliant, but who, he thought should take advantage of any fortuitous circumstance that might arise. Resting his elbows on the arms of his chair and putting the tips of the fingers of one hand against those of the other, he leaned back and proceeded:

"The proposition is that the candidate shall preach a sermon on next Easter Sunday in the church. He will dine with the owner, thus making her acquaintance. If she is pleased with him and his sermon and if he is pleased with her the arrangement may be perfected. If not the candidate is at liberty to go his way, and the lady will look for another. My advice, Mr. Baxter, is for you to permit me to enter you as the candidate. If no advantage comes to you directly one may come indirectly. If you acquit yourself well it may lead to a call elsewhere."

This seemed reasonable to the curate. He asked if the matter of the condition would be kept secret and was informed that his not mentioning it was one of the requirements. After having spent an hour with the bishop he gave his consent and took the next train for home. Within a week he received a note from the bishop that all had been arranged, and straightway Mr. Baxter began to prepare himself for the coming ordeal.

Easter Sunday falling in a spring month is apt to be pleasant. The Easter that Baxter preached his trial sermon opened bright and beautiful. He arrived at the station at Masonia to meet an auto sent for him by the lady whose church he was to preach in, and was conveyed to her house. She was a Mrs. Mason. Her family owned everything in sight of the center of the village, and hence its name.

On Baxter's arrival at the Mason homestead he was ushered into a drawing room, where he waited for some one to receive him. A heavy curtain draped an east window, and Baxter, desirous of letting in the sunlight, went to it and pulled it aside. What was his astonishment to uncover a girl. The blood rushed into her cheeks and she bolted for the door. Then the curate heard her running upstairs.

"Surely," he remarked to himself, "this whole affair is amazing. It's my opinion that in following the bishop's advice I have acted very foolishly. No good can come of it."

In a few minutes more a middle-aged, or, rather, elderly, woman entered the room. She was dressed in a most absurd fashion. It struck Baxter that she had rigged herself out to make herself look young, and nothing is more grotesque than an old face decked in the trappings of youth.

"I am Mrs. Mason," she said, advancing and graciously extending her hand. "The bishop has spoken very highly of you, not only of your talents, but of your Christian qualities. He assured me that I will not need to look further for a rector."

Baxter bowed. Inwardly he said, "You'll have to look a good deal further for a husband." Outwardly he told the lady that the bishop had doubtless raised false expectations of him. Then the lady told him that whoever was selected as rector for her church would be untrammelled by those cliques that are so intolerable to clergyment. Indeed, she had determined that the edifice should be used for those who need a church, but cannot afford to build one. It should be free to all. As to the rector he was not to be installed till there was every reason to believe that he was the man for the place, and once installed he could not be driven out, as the lady expressed it, "by a lot of clattering spinsters," for he would be part owner of the property.

When she said this the lady looked down at the floor, causing her listener to believe that she referred to the matrimonial condition attached to the appointment.

While they were chatting the auto was announced, and Baxter and Mrs. Mason was driven to the church. He found an indiscriminate congregation assembling, nearly all being poor persons, judging from their dress and appearance. There was something so little to his taste in the affair that he was not his usual self. He got through the service well enough, but when he came to the sermon there beneath him was the curious looking Mrs. Mason and in the same pew with her the girl he had found secreted behind the curtain. When the latter glanced up at him, which she seldom did, she looked ashamed. The natural consequence of all this was that he bungled his sermon, and, what made the matter worse, he could see plainly that Mrs. Mason was grievously disappointed in him.

After the services Mrs. Mason drove the curate back to her residence, scarcely speaking a word to him on the way. He wondered what would be the independence she had promised of any man holding a pulpit with her for his wife, even though he owned half of the church. He was not sorry that she was dissatisfied with him. He would be relieved of telling her that he would decline the honor of the appointment with the condition attached.

On reaching the house Baxter was left in the drawing room again, while Mrs. Mason went upstairs. He heard voices above in what sounded like animated discussion. One voice he recognized as Mrs. Mason's. The other was also that of a woman, but seemed to belong to a young person. Baxter was too much of a gentleman to listen to what was said and closed the door between him and the disputants.

Baxter wondered if the girl he had surprised and had seen at church would be at dinner. She came to the table late and looked much disturbed. When the curate was introduced she bowed without looking at him, which caused him to think that he was unacceptable to her as well as to Mrs. Mason.

"My niece, Eleanor," said the older lady, and proceeded to unfold her napkin.

Baxter was uncomfortable throughout the whole dinner. When it was finished Eleanor led the way into the drawing room, and Mrs. Mason went upstairs. Eleanor—she was Miss Eleanor Rutledge—did not seem disposed to open the conversation, so Baxter spoke of the church, the congregation and the praiseworthy object of its foundation, which could be more successfully carried out because she owned the property. At this last assertion Miss Rutledge looked antagonistic.

"Isn't your aunt the owner?" asked the curate.

"No."

"Who is?"

"I am."

Baxter was astonished.

"This matter has gone far enough, Mr. Baxter," she said. "I must explain, whether my aunt likes it or not. She is my guardian till I am twenty-one. She is decidedly queer and does things that I don't approve of, but can't help. This whole scheme of putting the church into the keeping of a rector is hers, not mine."

"But the matrimonial condition that the appointee should marry the owner?"

"Oh, my aunt doesn't believe in love. She intended to select a husband for—the owner of the church, who would have the bishop's approval. Just as if she could force me into such a scheme."

There was silence for a few moments. Baxter was looking at her intently; she was equally intent on the floor.

"What were you doing behind the window curtain?" he asked.

Seeing that she was about to bolt for the door, he barred the way.

"You needn't tell me what you were doing there," he said. "I will tell you. You proposed to have a look at the candidate to see what sort of a fellow he was."

The rest of this story is a simple love tale that any one may read anywhere at any time. Baxter is now rector of the church owned by his wife.

Mrs. Mason has not been sent to an insane asylum yet, but people say she should be. She says:

His Promise.

A Mobile man who was continually hard up had so many note at the bank he could not leave town except on Sundays and holidays. He had a note falling due every banking day. He dropped into the bank one day and spoke genially to the president.

"I came in to fix up that little matter of mine," he said. "I'd like to renew it for a time."

The bank president had the note on his desk. He picked it up and studied it carefully. "Jim," he finally said, "I don't think this note is made out properly."

"Why not?" asked the alarmed borrower.

"It reads, 'I promise to pay,' not 'I promise to renew.'"

They Were Both Satisfied.

The drug clerk wrapped the bottle of cough medicine carefully in a neat white paper scented with tooth powder, and tide the package up with a pink string.

"Seventy-five cents," he said, setting it on the counter.

The old man laid down a nickel, slipped the bottle into his pocket and opened the door.

"That's seventy-five cents," said the clerk, raising his voice.

"Well, I've paid ye," grunted the old man. "There's your five!"

"Seventy-five," shouted the clerk, seeing the old party about to escape.

"I give ye five," yelled back the old man, as he made a dash for the once-an-hour Bingville electric and boarded it.

"Oh, well," sighed the clerk, as he opened the cash drawer and flipped the five-cent piece into it, "we stand to make two cents anyhow!"

Pedagogue.

The word "pedagogue," as applied to school teachers, is from a Greek word, paidagogos, compounded of pais, boy, and agogos, leader; hence paidagogos, leader of boys. In ancient Greece the paidagogos was not strictly an instructor, but a domestic slave who looked after the boys of a family, took them to and from school and kept them off the streets. The boys were put in his charge at the age of six, and he probably sat with them in school. Although his position was simply that of a trusted servant, it came in time to be applied to the teacher, though always with a slurring or contemptuous significance.

Glass Solvent.

Hydrofluoric acid is an acid compound of hydrogen and fluorine. It may be prepared by the action of sulphuric acid upon cryolite in an appropriate apparatus made of lead or platinum. It may thus be readily obtained in a liquid form and is colorless. Its vapors are exceedingly poisonous, and the liquid itself, even when mixed with more or less water, causes severe swellings on the skin. Great care must therefore be taken in working with this acid. Hydrofluoric acid dissolves glass, forming hydro fluosilicic acid with its silica; hence its use for making etchings on glass.

Game in Manchuria.

The long-haired tiger is found throughout Manchuria wherever there is hilly country, but is never found on the plains. It is extremely difficult to bag and is by no means numerous. In addition to tigers the following game may be found in Manchuria: Bear (black and brown), wapiti, Sika deer (two species), roe deer serow, wild pig, leopard and lynx. All, however, are scarce and hard to bag with the exception of roedere and pig.

The motorcycle was traveling too rapidly to stop and was struck by the automobile. Neither machine was damaged and they proceeded on their way.

Your selection of your family optician is of vital importance to you. Neglect of your and your children's eyes is the cause of many physical ailments, such as headaches, nervousness, floating specks, inflamed eyelids, sick stomach and sometimes complete nervous breakdown. "I wish to marry your daughter, sir."

"You? Why, you don't make enough to keep her in hats."

"Is that so? Then do me a favor, will you? Just make your refusal good and strong and let me back out gracefully. I might be able to make her happy, but it's a cinch I'll never be."

Useless Expense.

"We've got to cut down expenses," announced Mr. Riverside, "and I think we'll begin by giving up our box at the opera."

"Oh, Henry, you surely wouldn't think of doing that?" protested his wife.

"Why not? If my business keeps on as rotten as it is now I won't be able to buy any new gowns, and there is no use paying rent for a show window when you haven't got any goods to show."

Talks on Banking

(American Bankers' Association)

No. 10—When You Borrow Money.

In the course of human events it becomes necessary for most people to borrow money. Business men who can make 10 per cent or more out of trading find it profitable to borrow in order to carry on business on a larger scale, discount their bills and carry complete stocks. Others find it desirable at times to borrow for various purposes, and some find it necessary to borrow because they have either failed to save, or have been unable to save and are confronted with an exigency that requires money.

Should you at any time find yourself in such a condition, do not borrow money from your friends, go to your bank. That is what banks are for. They live by their loans, and no banker will refuse a loan that meets certain requirements and is in his estimation good. It is proposed in the next two or three talks on banking to tell you what the banker wants to know when you offer him your note. Whether the loan is large or small the same rules apply.

In the first place the banker will expect you to be a depositor. Most banks make it a rule to lend to only those who are customers, and customers mean depositors. If you favor the banker with your account, giving him a profit from the use of your money, he will be glad to reciprocate and let you use his money when you need it and offer the proper security. The rule is well established to lend in the proportion of not over five to one; that is, if you keep a balance of $100, the banker would lend you $500 if he thought well of your credit standing. The greatest mistake business men make is to keep little or no balance in the bank, and then expect the bank to accommodate them with loans.

Take an actual case that happened recently within the experience of the writer of these talks. A business man wanted a note of $100 discounted to meet his payroll. The banker knew him. His moral standing was good. In looking up the account his balance was but 50 cents. Now what did that indicate? Just this: That the would-be borrower had trusted everybody until his capital was on his books, here, there and everywhere, and he was not collecting his bills. He had no "free money" to carry on his business. He had no working capital. He was "strapped." The banker was perfectly justified in asking the borrower either to make better collections, or get his affairs in such shape that when pay day came he would not have to depend upon borrowed money to pay his men.

Nothing so hurts an application for a loan in a well-managed bank as a low average balance, and all good bankers give heed to this factor. Therefore, as a starting point, do your business through a bank, depositing your receipts and making your payments by check, and keep a balance large enough to gain the banker's good will when he looks at his ledgers to see how much of your own money you have available when the needs of business require. Don't do all your business on borrowed money, for if the banker finds it out, he won't discount your note.

RESOLUTION OF RESPECT.

Whereas, The Almighty has seen fit to remove from our midst Mrs. J. Lodge, wife of Brother Jack Lodge, who passed into the Great Beyond May 31, 1916, in this city.

Whereas, Her death leaves a vacancy that will be deeply felt by many of the members of Panama-Pacific Exposition Lodge, No. 5; therefore, be it Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon our minutes and a copy be sent to brother lodges and a copy be sent to The Enterprise for publication.

Here is about the pitiliest sermon that was ever preached: "Our ingress into life is naked and bare, our progress through life is trouble and care, our egress out of it we know not where; but, doing well here, we shall do well there. I could not tell more by preaching a year."

EATING DOG FLESH MUCH OF A MYTH

Long resident in China and having been stationed at many of the treaty ports, I have, whenever home on leave, been asked by my friends whether or not the Chinese eat dogs, cats and rats, and in particular as to whether it is a fact that dogs' flesh is regularly offered for sale in open Market, says a correspondent of the London Field. The expression "chow-chow" means food in the Chinese language. Is, therefore, the so-called "chow" dog, bred as a pet in Europe, the edible dog of China or not?

To these queries I have replied that the word chow-chow is pigeon English for food, and not a Chinese word at all; nor to my knowledge do the Chinese regularly eat the dog flesh of any of the animals mentioned. Yet it is true that in the Canton province, at any rate, dog's flesh figures in the market as human food to some extent.

When stationed in the interior I have occasionally seen the most abject of beggars wending his way at sundown to headquarters in some ruined temple or cave, dragging at the end of a string the carcass of a dead dog or cat, the flesh of which would undoubtedly go into the pot for the evening meal. Having quite recently been again referred to as to the dog meat eating question, I decided to write to an old friend now stationed in Canton, asking him to have especial inquiries made in his district. The result is as follows. I quote his letter verbatim: "There is a dog market in the Canton city where dogs of all kinds, from the plump, roly poly puppy to the 'mangy wonk,' are exposed for sale; cats, also. They are disposed of as pets, also for food. Thus there can be no doubt of the fact that dogs' flesh is a recognized article of diet here. I have seen the dressed carcasses of both dogs and cats hanging in the shops, the dogs having a tuft of hair left on the end of the tail to show the color. Some customers, it would appear, prefer white or yellow animals, others pin their faith to the black article! I fancy the fat puppies are usually sold for pets, though they are called cho wdogs.

"The intelligent native Chinese to whom I have spoken on the matter all say that dogs' flesh is eaten to a considerable extent, not as a delicacy, but as a cheap kind of food; also that the use is confined to the very poorest among the people."

In conclusion, I may mention that at intervals of many years and in various parts of China I have asked Chinese officials with whom I have been on intimate terms whether they had ever tasted dogs' flesh, or had it offered to them at meals. On one occasion only did I receive an answer in the affirmative. My friend stated that at a dinner given by a Cantonese military officer some dark looking meat was served up. This, he was informed, was dog ham. The idea of eating dog was repulsive to him and he did not taste it.

A Puzzled Artist.

Achenbach, the German artist, enjoyed a vogue some years ago. A certain collector had bought from an art dealer a seascape represented as a genuine Aschenbach. Afterward it was pronounced to be a copy. The buyer brought an action against the dealer, who turned the tables by declaring that his picture was genuine and the other was a copy. Achenbach himself was summoned by the courts to tell which was which. Amazed at the absolute similarity of the two paintings, he gazed at them for a long time, inspected them closely, front and back, sniffed them and then frankly admitted he could not tell which was the original and which the copy.

FACTORY GROWTH IN RUSSIA GREAT

The unprecedented activity in the building of new factories in Russia is scarcely realizable to those who cannot keep closely in touch with the industrial progress of the country.

The Trade and Commercial Gazette, a daily commercial paper, published in Petrograd, lists each day the new factories which have been opened.

They average from ten to fifteen a day, the issue of April 15th, for example, names eleven such industrial establishments, the products of which are as follows: Wire, mechanical contrivances for the army, tobacco, glass iron and steel manufactured products, sugar, paper from wood pulp, papier mache and cardboard, woollens.
